PART IV — READING

exercise 15 · 5 points

Will Robots Do Our Housework?

For years, films have shown homes where a friendly robot cooks dinner, washes the dishes and folds the laundry. Real homes look different, but a few robots have already moved in. In many cities, small round machines clean the floors while their owners are at work. In some gardens, robot mowers cut the grass on their own.

Each of these robots does only one simple job. A robot vacuum cleaner moves around a room, avoids the furniture and goes back to its charger when the battery is low. However, most of them cannot pick up a sock or open a door. Tasks that people find easy, such as tidying a bedroom, are extremely hard for a machine. Objects in a home come in thousands of shapes, and they are rarely in the same place twice.

Engineers are trying to solve this problem with better cameras and artificial intelligence. Some technology companies say that robots which can fold clothes and put away the shopping will be on sale soon. Other experts are less optimistic. In their view, a robot that can do all the housework is still far in the future. The first models will probably be slow and make many mistakes.

There are also serious doubts. The first is the price: a robot with arms and hands is likely to be expensive, so at first only rich families may be able to buy one. The second is privacy. A robot that moves around a home needs cameras and a map of every room, and many people wonder who will see that information. Finally, some people who clean homes for a living are worried about losing their jobs.

So, will robots ever do the housework? Probably only some of it. In the next few years, more homes will probably have machines that do one boring job well. However, a robot that cooks, cleans and looks after the children may stay in films for a long time. Until then, most dishes will still be washed by human hands.

15. Read the text and circle the correct answer. · 5 pts

1. What is the text mainly about?

- (A) It compares robot vacuum cleaners with the other robots used at home.
- (B) It explains how films have shown friendly robots in people's homes.
- (C) It describes today's home robots, future predictions and the doubts about them.

2. What can we infer about most robot vacuum cleaners?

- (A) They can open a door to clean the next room.
- (B) They could not put a dirty sock in the laundry basket.
- (C) They need a person to carry them back to the charger.

3. What do the less optimistic experts believe?

- (A) The first models will probably be slow and make many mistakes.
- (B) Robots that fold clothes are already sold in many shops.
- (C) Better cameras will make home robots cheap for everyone.

4. Why are some people worried about privacy?

- (A) A home robot needs cameras and a map of every room.
- (B) Home robots will record every phone call that people make.
- (C) A robot with arms and hands is likely to be expensive.

5. What does the writer suggest in the last paragraph?

- (A) Families should wash dishes by hand to protect people's jobs.
- (B) Robots that do one simple job will spread before robots that do everything.
- (C) Robots that cook and look after children will be sold next year.
